TO THE TOBACCO GROWER.

What Liquid Manure Will Do.

Cincinnati Tobacco Journal.

The Jefferson County (W. Va.) Union says that Mr. H. H. Hargis, of Waverly, delivered to the Fort Kirkman warehouse over 9,000 pounds of tobacco unassorted in the bundle, the product of fourteen acres, for which he received $1,722.42, and from him the following valuable information concerning his method of growing his tobacco crop was gleaned, which we lay before our readers.

He stated that he had noticed the excellent effects of liquid manure on garden vegetables for several years, and was led to try it on an small portion of his tobacco, and the result was even beyond his expectations. He built a large leech escape of holding about a wagon load of barn yard manure. To this he applied several hundred of water. Before setting he marked off his ground and applied about a pint of the liquid to each spot where the plant was to be set. The plants were then set, and when they had grown five or six inches another pint was poured at the roots. The effect on the tobacco was wonderful, both in starting the plants and in the subsequent growth. He treated only about one-fourth of an acre in this way, but is certain that if he had gone to the expense of say $5 an acre, to liquid his manure, using only about three loads of manure to the acre, it would have made no difference in the crop of 200 pounds per acre, and increased his gross receipts fully five hundred dollars. The advantage shown is in the less amount of manure required, and the immediate effect seen in starting the plants, and in their subsequent growth. This is a valuable hint, which we would like to see our tobacco growers act upon.

Death of Maj. John Bromagh.

Liberty, Mo., Tribune.

Although his great age and physical infirmity during some years, would lead his friends and acquaintances to look for the death of Maj. Bromagh at any time, yet it was none the less a matter of great regret to them. This event occurred Dec. 26, 1893, at his residence in the western portion of this county.

He was born in Montgomery Co., Va., Aug. 22, 1798, and was the son of David Bromagh, of that county. His mother was Anne Sandridge, of Spotsylvania Co. The Bromaghs are an ancient and honorable family in Virginia. Until his settlement in Claytown, Mo., 1845, Maj. Bromagh was engaged in the energetic business life. He commenced business with Richmond, Va., 1857. In 1859 he made a visit to his home in Virginia, and thence to his home in Claytown, Mo., 1860. During the first visit of the Civil war he was in the line of the 1st Mo. Inf. in the battle of Belmont, Mo. After the cessation of the war, he resumed his business in New Orleans, La. In 1865 he was chosen, and accepted the position of clerk in the United States Court at Claytown, Mo. In 1868 he was in business in Louisville, Ky. In 1872 he returned to Claytown, Mo., where he made his home during the residue of his life.

In 1870 he was married to Miss Hannah W. Morris, daughter of John W. Morris, a gentleman and thoroughly informed, educated citizen, the daughter of a prominent family, who was also from Virginia. Of this marriage there were born five children: David F., Benjamin, John W., and Virginia and Mary, who died in infancy.

He was buried on the day succeeding his death in the cemetery at Claytown, in this county. The burial service was conducted by Rev. Mr. Mann. His remains were taken to his city. Maj. Bromagh had been a member of the Episcopal Church from his youth.

Maj. Bromagh was in manners and modes of thought a Virginia gentleman, and was extremely well educated, well educated, and every degree, easy, lively and generous in his nature, and firm in his ideas of propriety as well as in his political views. For years his age had largely prevented him from the active duties of his home, but he was the last of the past few years with him, resulting in his death. He was a true gentleman, for his willingness at all times to render to every man his due. Kind, honest, and full, full of years and of social honors, he left his family in tears and his friends in sorrow.
